

A common feature of pseudoreflexion- and Poincar groups
Christian Lange

I answer the question posed by Davis: When is the underlying space of an orbifold a topological manifold?

It amounts to the classification of finite groups acting isometrically on a Euclidean vector space such that the quotient space is homeomorphic to the original vector space.